You requested a review of the Proposed Release to Consumer Reporting Agencies. Above are the scheduled date and time for your review. If you cannot make this appointment, please reschedule at least twenty-four hours in advance. To reschedule your appointment, contact the person named above.

Your review is limited to the information on the Notice of Proposed Release to Consumer Reporting Agencies. The review will cover the amount of the balance. No other issues will be discussed. You may present documented information about your balance, or you may have a lawyer present the information at your expense.

Below is a list of all the obligations that the Child Support Recovery Unit has on record for your case. Please look it over to make sure that all court orders affecting your child support balance are there. Also enclosed is a certified payment record showing all the payments that have been credited to your balance. Please also look over the payment record carefully and match it to your records.

Note that the balance shown on the obligation may be higher than the balance on the Proposed Release to Consumer Reporting Agencies. This is because the Notice of Proposed Release to Consumer Reporting Agencies includes amounts of:

- ◆ Missed periodic payments for public assistance reimbursement,
- ◆ Missed periodic payments for foster care reimbursement,

- ♦ Missed medical and child support payments that the child support recovery unit is required or has been asked to enforce.

These are the amounts which are reported to the consumer reporting agencies.

The obligations below show the amounts above along with:

- ♦ Missed periodic medical and child support payments that the child support recovery unit is not required and has not been asked to enforce,
- ♦ The unpaid amount of an entire reimbursement order.

These additional amounts are not reported to the consumer reporting agencies, but are still due.
